Eleanor Ferguson Dies; Taught Here Twenty Years

Mrs. Eleanor Ferguson who taught the intermediate department of the Mokena public school for twenty years, died in her home 113 Oakview Ave., Joliet Monday morning following a protracted illness.

Mrs. Ferguson taught the intermediate department of the Mokena school without a break for the past twenty years and this Christmas was the first one she missed in helping to prepare and direct the school Christmas program.

She was in poor health last year and when her teaching contract expired last spring she did not renew it and took her teacher's pension instead. Her many friends in Mokena were greatly shocked to learn of her serious illness and death.

She was one of the best teachers the Mokena public school ever had. Hundreds of pupils were taught by her and she made an enviable record for efficiency and high standards.

She is survived by her husband Earl four brothers, William, Ray, Edmund and Louis Hedstrom all of Joliet.

Funeral services were held Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Carlson Funeral home in Joliet with the Rev. W. J. Schuerman officiating. Burial was made in Oakwood cemetery.

Many Mokena people and members of the Mokena School Board attended the funeral services and sent floral offerings.

Mokena Student Nurse Is Awarded Special Honor

A communication received from the Navy department advises that Hyacinth Rinke of Mokena is one of three nurses selected from the Senior Class of St. Joseph's hospital in Joliet to serve her Senior Cadet period in a U. S. Navy hospital.

Two and one half years ago this class of 24 began an accelerated, but complete course as members of the U. S. Cadet Nurses Corp. Ten months ago the majority of these young ladies volunteered, upon completion of their course to serve a six months period in a government hospital helping to care for wounded service men.

Of the five chosen from this class one has been assigned to the Army hospital at Galesburg and a second is now enroute to the Marine hospital at Staten Island, N. Y. The other three appointees, including Miss Rinke, will leave Dec. 31st, traveling under Navy orders, to report to the U. S. Navy hospital at Chelsea, Mass.

ANNOUNCE ENGAGEMENT

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Walsh of New Lenox announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter Beatrice to Mr. Earl Schroeder also of New Lenox. No definite date has as yet been set for the wedding.

Mr. Schroeder, was honorably discharged from the navy at Great Lakes on Christmas day and arrived home that same evening after serving over two years overseas. He was motor machinist mate, first class.

TO THE ORLAND PARK WOMAN'S CLUB WHO SANG CAROLS FOR ME

The Orland Park Women's Club members went carolling last Friday evening to the home of Mrs. Flora Parker in Orland. Mrs. Parker has the following to say of the thoughtfulness of these women: "It has been one year since I have been ill, and you can do a lot of thinking in that time. Tonight we feel how helpless we are, since death has entered our home and called another loved one. Such are our thoughts.

"Then suddenly lights of cars appeared and the cars stopped in front of our home, and soon sweet voices were singing Christmas carols; then came smiling faces.

"Keep up your good work. Its a big thing. I am sure every one feels that way when you lay in pain. But over all are the friendly smiles. It is sweet to be remembered. May health and happiness be with you all the new year."

MRS. FLORA PARKER

CANDLE LIGHT SERVICE TO BE REPEATED

In response to many requests the Candle Light service of Christmas Eve will be repeated in St. John's Evangelical church in Mokena on next Sunday evening at 8 o'clock. Some new things will be added. Many people were prevented from attending on Christmas night because of ice and sleet.

AWARDED FIRST PRIZE ON HAND MADE PURSE

Mrs. Anton Benson of Mokena made a very lovely black-cord purse and entered it in the Sears Roebuck store contest in Chicago. She was very agreeably surprised when she was awarded first prize of $15 on it.

Garage and Truck Destroyed By Night Fire

A fire occurred in the garage of Mr. Frank Taylor of south Cedar Road, in New Lenox, Monday Dec. 24. The garage was attached to the chicken house, but the latter was saved. A truck which was in the garage burned with the building.

The Taylor family was not home at the time, and the cause of the fire is not known. The New Lenox Fire Department responded to the call.

Mokena Man Practicing Pre-war Railroad Trade

Seoul, Korea, Dec. 10—Being an Army private doesn't stop Richard L. Gilbert of Mokena, from practicing his pre-war railroad trade. The 27 year old signal section wireman of the Seventh Infantry Division recently ran a Korean engine here and instructed native engineers on correcting defects in their cars and engines.

Formerly a locomotive fireman for the Burlington railroad in Illinois, Gilbert examined a local engine on his time off and was amazed on how badly it was neglected. The general condition, he discovered, were deplorable. "Americans should see the filthy crowded conditions and non-schedule service here," he explained. They'd appreciate good old USA comfort speed and modern beauty," he added.

"Passengers here hang out the doors and cabs of the engine," he continued. "And schedules? They just don't have them, yet."

A graduate of Delton High school in Delton, Mich. Gilbert is the husband of Mrs. Iris M. Gilbert who lives in Woodland with their children, Richard 2 1/2, Gloria Jean 4, and Roger L. Rue, 5. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gilbert of Route 1, Mokena.

Young Farmers To Be Given Chance For Short Course

Young farmers of Will County will be given an opportunity to establish a short course of their own meeting one night a week at the Joliet Township high school, according to E. W. Rowley, Vocational Agriculture Instructor. The course as it is being set up for this winter is entitled "Determining the Weaknesses in Various Agricultural Systems in Will County and Arriving at Methods for Strengthening the Weaknesses." The course, which will run from seven to ten meetings, is open to all young farmers in the area, and while there is no upper age limit, it is desirable that the young men be out of high school and usually not over thirty-five years of age.

Such courses are firmly established in many departments of Vocational Agriculture all over the United States and with the close of the War Training Program it now becomes possible for the Joliet Township High school to offer such a short course. At the meetings various angles of the farming business will be discussed from the standpoint of finding out just what is wrong with particular livestock or crop enterprise, and what steps will need to be taken if business is to be improved.

Special motion pictures are being arranged for most meetings, and several outside speakers are being engaged besides discussions of improvements in the agricultural business. It is expected that a few meetings will be devoted to farm credit, various types of insurance which young men should carry, and livestock diseases.

Any young farmer living within driving distance of Joliet is invited to attend these meetings, which are tuition free. It is also planned that a recreational program will follow these meetings during which time those in attendance will be given an opportunity to cultivate new friendships. This is being added to the program with the idea that a farmer who is useful to his community is one who knows not only those who live near him, but also those in the townships surrounding him.

It is expected that a large group will attend these meetings as a survey of those who have graduated from the Joliet Township high school during the past two years indicates that all will be in attendance, and it is expected that many more who have graduated in previous years will be in attendance as well as some who have graduated from other high schools, and some who did not attend high school.

The first meeting will be held at the Agriculture Building across from the front entrance to the high school on Monday evening, January 7, 1946 and all who intend to come to the school should arrive between 7:30 and 8 o'clock. Final arrangements for the winter program will be worked out at the first meeting of the class.

NEW YEAR 1946 will put on his show at the midnight hour, as always in the past. As the show-boat disappears round the bend in the river and we get back into the old routine, we hope for you that there was more to it than the fleeting joys of the New Year holiday, that "something has been added"—something of permanent stature—and that 1946 will really make a big difference to you.

Tells of Christmas Parade In Calif.

We would like to share with those especially who have renewed their acquaintance, thru The News-Bulletin, of Mrs. Mable Hart, and to also share with all our readers, the lovely description of the magnificent parade and decoration for Christmas in Hollywood, California, which Mrs. Hart gave in a letter to us last week.

"All of the windows and doors are open again today, and no matter where you look, you see green grass and pepper trees and flowers—the poinsettias are in bloom now and they are so colorful at Christmas time—we have no snow you know, so the green and red make us THINK of Christmas.

"For the first time in five years, they have the famous Santa Claus Lane in Hollywood again this year. They start it with a magnificent parade and they had over a million people there—Santa and the stars ride in the sleigh—it cost $25,000 and is a gorgeous thing—each night they have that sleigh driving down the boulevard and each night two different stars are in it. Marie Wilson and Ken Murray will be guests of Santa Claus Tuesday night.

"They have two solid miles of Christmas trees on the lane, each tree 26 feet high, and decorations across the street with lights. Its a regular fairy land and downtown, they have miles of different decorations and each suburb has the same, some only eight or ten blocks, others for two miles, but they say that Pasadena beats them all this year.

"You can't have things like that back east because the first now storm or sleet storm would destroy all the tinsel and paper mache and light globes. But California makes so much of the holidays so that the tourists can enjoy it, altho the natives never miss it either. The same with the Rose parade in Pasadena on New Year's Day. Over a million people see that and what a congestion afterwards. But its a sight to see.

"Its glorious to ride downtown on a day like this in an open street car in just an ordinary suit, and the news said this morning that you are having a cold spell back there.

"I can still see the old 'potbelly' stove in the school house which Laura (Morris of New Lenox) described, as we kids would take off our caps and mittens and overshoes and rush into the school room to stand around the fire and get warm. And those who sat in the back seats never did quite thaw out, while those near the stove almost roasted—happy old days at that—meant more than some of the 'ultra shindigs' of today.

"Ken (the Elderloves manager) gave Edgar Bergen a party at the Beverly Hills Club which cost him way over a thousand dollars. The cake alone cost $300 and the tiny bride doll on top wore

We have had the above picture for several weeks, but an overflow of news and advertisements have crowded it out. Since this picture was taken, the Mokena man has been honorably discharged. It shows Mr. Marshall K. Muller, of Mokena whose rank was T. Sgt., receiving congratulations from Col. Har-

What Is Doing New Year's Eve

This being the first peace time New Year's Eve in four years, there will be plenty of entertainment and celebrating next Monday night, New Year's Eve. Turn to the back page of this issue for a list of various amusements being planned locally.

Must Give Account Soil Conservation

Carl M. Bormet, county committee-man in charge of the check of performance under the 1945 program in Cook County, announced that it is very important for farmers who signed the Farm Plan in the spring of 1945 to report at an early date the soil-conserving practices carried out on their farms.

Reports on performance are necessary before any payments can be made to those participating in the Agricultural Conservation program. All farmers who have not filed a report at the county office should do so immediately. Even though all intended practices have not been completed, it is advisable to make a partial report at this time.

GREETINGS FROM HAWAII

Another Greeting sent us from Hawaii, by Seaman 1-c Harley Gillett. He wrote: "When you get tired of looking thru the window at the snow, maybe this picture will give you new inspiration. As for me I would rather be in Mokena, snow and all."

Rural Mail Service Hit By Icy Highways

Snow and sleet covered all this section since Monday, leaving highways very slippery and dangerous. Many cars and trucks were ditched and garage men were kept busy with day and night calls or towing jobs. Icy sidewalks made even walking a hazard. Many country side roads were left impassable and rural mail carriers could not make deliveries in some instances.

Rock Island suburban service was not interrupted very much, most of the trains being well on time.

Merriest Christmas Since 1940

As a prelude to the merriest Christmas since 1940, the Tinley Park Garden Club met at the home of Mrs. John Swisher, Thursday, December 20. A blazing fire crackled on the hearth, candles, large and small, burned brightly everywhere. Under a beautifully decorated and lighted tree, gifts were piled for the annual Christmas exchange.

Topics of discussion were: "Keeping Christmas", "The care of Christmas Gift plants", "The trimming of Evergreens for use in Decoration", "Keeping Needles on Christmas trees with the use of Plant food", "When the Christmas tree has served its time in the House, it still can be useful in the Garden as a winter feeding spot for Birds." A very new, novel and practical way of raising plants, hedge, etc. without sun was brought to us by Mrs. Baldwin.

Mrs. Moss, president, was very proud to have as her guest, her daughter Marianne, who recently returned from England. Marianne brought us vivid pictures of the countryside and gardens of England, as well as stories of other places she had visited, including Paris. Thanks, Marianne, Your many friends wish for you and your husband a lifetime of health wealth and happiness.

Singing together Christmas carols reading a prayer and legends of the Christmas Rose and Holly makes one realize how many things there are which are solid and reassuring, things which will never be stamped out, like love, love of one's fellow man and love of music and all other forms of beauty. Each year at this time a collection of scrap books, toys, jelly etc. has been sent to the Fruit and Flower Guild and again our chairman, Mrs. O'Neill, has continued this practice.

Wrapped in brightly colored Christmas paper, were individual "Encorement Books", the gift of Mrs. each member. With the exchange of gifts, packages in gay papers and sat-in ribbons, small Santa Claus of red yarn were distributed.

"I heard a bird sing, In the dark of December, A magnificent thing And sweet to remember; We are nearer to spring Than we were in September, I heard a bird sing, In the dark of December.

With the reading of the above verse a suet bird feeder was presented Mrs. Swisher in appreciation of her hospitality.

The highlight of the afternoon came when our hostess invited us to "take a peek down the street where old friends meet". Centering the dining room table was a lane edged with old fashioned street lamps, the base of the pole being a red funnel, the pole a twig of evergreen, the light, a plastic Christmas tree ornament.

In the center was the "City Square" with a choir of wax candle figures. Silver cornucopias held candy, red crepe paper bags, popcorn.

The menu consisted of potato salad, cold meat, pickles, olives, hot rolls, Christmas cake and cookies, coffee tea and candy.

"A Winter Wonderland" describes the tiny snow clad village and hillside arranged by Mrs. Swisher in the dining room bay window with its tiny church, rail fences, houses, animals and personnel and hundred or more miniature pines, it has made talk.

Other guests present were Mrs. Louise Goessel, Mrs. Marion Swisher and son Billy, Mrs. Shirley Roe and daughter Judy.

So with a feeling of warmth and hospitality we remember the first time in four war torn years we have Peace on Earth.

GREETINGS FROM PHILIPPINES

We received a Christmas greeting today from Sgt. Paul Lambrecht, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herb. Lambrecht of Frankfort. The printed verse read: "Thank God that, this season, the true spirit of Christmas prevails all over the world; and that I speak not in vain as I wish you every joy at Christmas, and happiness throughout the New Year. —Philippine Islands.

ATOMIC PICKET LINE OF THE YEAR . . . Shown at the General Motors building, Detroit, is a part of one of the largest picketing demonstrations in recent history. An estimated 10,000 marchers ringed the corporation's headquarters with placards and bands for nearly three hours. Canceled union contracts gave union worst setback it has received since 1937.

STEER UPSETS DETROIT . . . A steer that escaped from a Detroit packing house puts up a fight as two men try to hang on to their prize. Four steers broke out of the stock yards and caused considerable excitement in a business section of Detroit before they were caught. While no damage was done, thousands of citizens flocked to cover.

SYMBOLIC OF DEVASTATED LANDS . . . Even the youngsters of war-devastated lands are clearing away to start over again. Representative of millions, also, is his lack of clothing. These people will not be able to continue working this winter unless help is speedily forthcoming. The big push of the Victory Clothing collection for relief of people overseas will be held, January 7 to 31, in all sections of the United States.

GAVE PATTON BLOOD . . . Cpl. Salvatore DiBernardo, Port Chester, N. Y., who gave a blood transfusion to Gen. George S. Patton Jr., when the latter was rushed to a hospital at Heidelberg, following serious motor accident.

HOPE WINS AGAIN . . . For the fifth consecutive year, Bob Hope has been voted the top position in the Motion Picture Daily Annual poll of radio editors. Fred Allen, Fibber McGee and Molly, and Bing Crosby tied for second.

BATTLE OF LONDON . . . Cpl. Irving Ruben, Brooklyn, wears a British bobby's helmet, which he acquired during the battle of London. Ruben recently arrived in New York aboard the super troop carrier, USS Washington.

YOUNGEST UMPIRE . . . Henry P. McGowan, 18, Ozone Park, L. I., N. Y., is the youngest umpire in professional baseball. He recently signed with the class D, Ohio State baseball league.

PAT HURLEY ALWAYS A STORMY PETREL

WASHINGTON.—This town, dead-ly afraid of peacetime boredom, pricked up its ears and licked its chops when Pat Hurley issued his stentorian resignation as ambassador to China. It then settled down to enjoy a good show.

Washington has known Pat ever since 1912 when as a dashing young attorney from Oklahoma he used to appear before congressional committees for the Choctaw nation, and they know he always puts on a good show. Once in testifying before the senate insular affairs committee as secretary of war, Pat shouted: "You cannot call me a liar. You can run your star-chamber sessions without me. I have taken all I can stand." Whereupon he flounced out of the room.

Some years earlier, Pat appeared before the house Indian affairs committee to oppose opening the tribal rolls of the Choctaw nation to certain Indians who claimed they were eucered out of their tribal lands. And he was severely criticized by Webster Ballinger, who pointed out that just two years before, Hurley had represented the Wards, an Indian family which sought to have the Choctaw tribal rolls opened. Thus Hurley was in the position of arguing on both sides of the same question in the brief period of two years.

Pat was not quite as ferocious in those days, however, and for some unexplained reason did not threaten to kick Ballinger out of the committee room.

PATRICK J. O'HURLEY

Pat Hurley has come a long way from those days when Oklahoma was an Indian territory. Born O'Hurley, he dropped the "O" and the Catholic religion of his father to become a Baptist, and after working his way through an Indian college, he had the courage to come to Washington, take a law degree at George Washington, and marry the daughter of Adm. Henry B. Wilson, then and now one of the most beautiful ladies in the capital. It is a long way from such lowly beginnings to his more recent interviews with Joe Stalin, his airplane flights through the Near East, and his powerful position as the right bower of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. But Pat has staged a colorful personal row at almost every milestone along the way.

In Chungking, he first rowed with Gen. Al Wedemeyer over the question of sending a mission to the so-called Communist section of China to evaluate the importance of its military strength. For a while he and Wedemeyer weren't speaking to each other though they occupied adjoining bedrooms in the same house.

Later at a Chungking cocktail party, Wedemeyer's chief of staff, Maj. Gen. Robert B. McClure, chided Hurley for sending General Marshall a telegram of protest against Wedemeyer.

"You pup," boomed the ex-cow-puncher from Oklahoma, "I've shot men for less than that."

Guests had to separate the two men. The Chinese looked on, amused but not impressed. In China it brings severe loss of face to fight in public.

"Pat is Pat," mused FDR when informed of the fuss, "and there's nothing you can do about him."

CHRISTMAS CAROLS

If you happen near the secondary office of Rep. Leslie Arends of Illinois, house Republican whip, deep in the sub-basement of the capitol, you can hear strange sounds echoing through the catacomb-like corridors.

Arends and his five colleagues are getting their voices in trim for a special trans-Atlantic broadcast of Christmas carols — in which six members of the British parliament also will join-to be aired by the Mutual network on December 20.

Familiar carols, such as "Oh, Little Town of Bethlehem" and "Hark! The Herald Angels Sing" will be rendered by the legislators. The Americans and Britons will do a joint rendition of "Silent Night."

The other members of the Arends sextet are GOP Representatives Harve Tibbott of Pennsylvania, Paul Shafer of Michigan, Harry Towse of New Jersey, Frank Fellows of Maine and William Hill of Colorado.

The singing congressmen occasionally vary their practice sessions with "Sweet Adeline," according to Macon Reed, Mutual news reporter, a former army corporal who is helping to arrange the Christmas broadcast. However, Reed insists there is no "liquid encouragement" at such times.

CAPITAL CHAFF

California's new young Republican Sen. William F. Knowland was the only member of the senate to challenge Sen. Jim Eastland of Mississippi recently when Eastland made a lengthy speech attacking U. S. policy in Germany as too severe. . . . General Marshall was slated to become a director of the American Red Cross before Truman decided to send him to China. . . . Former GOP Congressman Mel Maas of Minnesota, a colonel in the marine aviation reserve, is back in Washington.

WORLD FELLOWSHIP OF CHRISTIANS

LESSON TEXT—Acts 10:34-43.
GOLDEN TEXT—The same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon Him.—Romans 10:12.

Fellowship is impossible where there is prejudice and intolerance. The world is full of it even now, after we have fought a global war to stop such inhumanity of man to man.

It would be a surprise even to some Christian people to learn that "God is no respecter of persons," that with Him a man is not received because he is of a particular race, color, education or social position.

God created all men. He loves all men, Christ died for all men, and every Christian ought to be desperately concerned that all men should hear about their Saviour and come to know the love of God.

The church of Christ has its greatest opportunity now to show that the things it professes to believe actually work in the relationship of man to man. They will work if we will only let them! Our lesson presents:

I. Principle—God Is No Respector of Persons (vv. 34, 35).

Peter had learned about God's love for the Gentiles by the vision given him concerning Cornelius. (Read Acts 10:1-33.)

Peter was a Jew, and God now used this vision to teach him a much needed lesson about the carrying of the gospel to the Gentiles. The Jews were (and still are)—let us remember it) God's chosen people. However, they were not chosen for their own comfort, convenience or glory, but that they might be channels for the outflowing of God's blessing to all nations.

Cornelius was typical of those in every nation who are ready for the preaching of the gospel. He was a God-fearing, righteous man, but nonetheless in need of redemption. God brought this man, who was ready to receive the message, together with the man Peter, who was prepared to preach it, and the result was salvation.

Whatever it may be that keeps us from carrying the gospel to all nations, we ought to recognize as unchristian, and put it aside. It may be race prejudice, for it still persists; but it may be an equally deadly indifference to the needs of others. Let us, like Peter, go to them and open our mouths (v. 34) to proclaim Christ.

II. Practice—Jesus Did Good to All (vv. 36-41).

The attributes of God are always active. He not only is good, He does good. So the principle, "no respecter of persons," is perfectly exemplified in our Lord Jesus who "went about doing good and healing all that were oppressed of the devil," and we may well place the emphasis on the word "all."

The death of Christ for their sins (v. 39), His resurrection from the dead for their justification (v. 40), the coming judgment for sin (v. 42), and the remission of sins in His name—these are the essentials of Peter's message.

Note how plain is the truth. Jesus has come and has wrought redemption for all who will believe. Now we must choose whether we want Him to be our Judge or our Redeemer. Either He is your Saviour, or He will be your judge. (John 3:17, 18.)

The proclamation of this message of redemption was never completed, even "while Peter yet spake these words, the Holy Spirit fell upon them all" (v. 44). Blessed interruption! Would that we might have more like it in our churches and Bible schools!

This leads up to our last point, namely, that we have a

III. Privilege—We Are to Preach to All People (vv. 42, 43).

Yes, it is a command (Matt. 28: 19, 20), but it is also an unestimable privilege to be called of God to tell all nations about the One in whom they have "remission of sins."

Let us preach that message. Book reviews, political addresses, discussion of civic or social problems will not bring the result. Forums, clubs, discussion groups, unless they have for their subject the Word of God, need not expect anything like this to happen.

Preaching of the Word of God concerning the person and work of Christ, whether it be in a home (like that of Cornelius) or in a great cathedral (and thank God, some of them do have such preaching), will result in some soul finding Christ and receiving the Holy Spirit.

It is worthy of note that these believers gave evidence of their new-found spiritual life by magnifying God, obeying His word, and testifying to others. It is to the credit of Peter and his companions that they recognized the workings of God's grace in the lives of these Gentiles.

May we also be quick to see, appreciate and encourage every true gospel work, whether it be among our own people or with some other race, whether in our church or in some humble cottage. "God is no respecter of persons."

FDR Went to Mark Twain For the Term 'New Deal'

The source of the term "New Deal," used by the Roosevelt administration, is still controversial, despite the fact that it was disclosed by the late President himself in a letter which he wrote to the International Mark Twain society on December 8, 1933, says Collier's.

In this letter, FDR stated that he took it "from that passage in the book, A Connecticut Yankee at King Arthur's Court, in which the Yankee declares that, in a country where only six people out of a thousand have any voice in the government, what the 994 dupes need is a new deal."

Kidneys Must Work Well—

For You To Feel Well
24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at night, swelling. Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

AN INNER SANCTUM MYSTERY
STARRING ARAB AND ANDY BLAKE WNU FEATURES

THE STORY THUS FAR: Lt. Andy Blake and his wife Arab, believed that a German spy ring was working out of her boarding house. Andy had searched Jones' house, nearby, and found some evidence, which he turned over to FBI. Later, Arab had told the girls that she had given evidence of loose talk to Andy and that he was keeping it in his home to deliver to Intelligence. Knowing they would be followed they went to Andy's home, where they read and sorted out the notes. They heard the window open and saw Renee climb in. She was overpowered and tied and taken down to the cellar for safekeeping. Both Andy and Arab were certain that Jones would soon follow.

CHAPTER XI

"Not at all. If you have any little errands to do, feel free to go ahead with them."

I watched her flounce around the cellar unfasting a clothesline. She dug into a tool chest, found a knife, and cut the clothesline into lengths. She came back and began packing Renee's wrists with a not-to-be-opened-until-Christmas skill.

She had finished with the wrists, and started to pass the free end of the rope around Renee's waist. "And kindly move back," she said, jabbing her finger into my ribs. "You needn't think I'm going to tie her to you. Will it make you less playful if I remark that she probably has a few friends waiting outside for her?"

"I was trying not to think of that." "Well, somebody better." She bent down, tied Renee's ankles, and said, "Bring her over to this straight chair."

I lifted Renee, still keeping my hand over her mouth, and carried her to the chair. Arab used another length of rope to tie her to the chair, and it began to look as if Renee would be staying with us for a while.

"Now," Arab said to our package, "will you be good if we don't gag you?" Renee nodded. "All right, Andy. You may have your hand back. Mrs. Fielding, if you scream I'll probably hit you with something."

I took away my hand, and Renee said huskily, "Why should I scream? When I do not come out, they will know something has happened. They will come after me. What does a half-hour more or less matter?"

That burned me. "I used to know a swell song," I said. "It was called the Marseillaise. It's funny, I never used to think it sounded like the Horst Wessel song. Are they both the same now?"

She looked at me with old, sleepless eyes. "I have forgotten the tune. We of the New Europe have no songs."

"I used to know a swell guy, too. A big kid from Dartmouth, named Bob Fielding. He married the prettiest girl who ever walked into Zelli's. He was killed in Spain. I thought he was killed fighting Germans."

"Everything," she said in a flat voice, "gets killed fighting the Germans. My husband. France. Everything."

"This might be a good time to see how the Germans like being killed."

For the moment there was a bite in her voice. "What good is a dead German to me? Why should I help you? Where were you when Bob was killed in Spain? Where were you when France was strangled? Do you remember June of 1940? Do you remember Reynaud crying for American planes? For clouds of American planes? Where were they?"

"On the drawing boards," I muttered. "But they're coming now." "Now is too late for me. I made my choice two years ago."

"And you chose the Germans."

"How would you like to starve for four months? How would you like your parents threatened with the concentration camp if you didn't obey orders? How would you like to have lost all hope? They wanted me to work for them. I held out for almost five months. How long would you have held out?"

She shivered. "The Germans cannot be beaten. They would kill me. They would kill my people in Britain."

"You know what all this excitement is about, don't you?"

"Yes. Landings in North Africa."

"It's the first step toward bringing France back to life."

"The Germans will kill your troops."

"Has your gang got word out yet?"

"Not yet. We did not see the pattern until today. It takes time to arrange to send a message. Either there must be a U-boat contact, or the message must be sent by short wave direct to Germany."

Arab picked up the Smith & Wesson. "I want to make sure," she said. She crept up the steps and crouched at the locked cellar door. Then she turned and whispered down to me, "Get the derringer from my pocketbook."

I went to the ping-pong table, dumped the sawed-off howitzer from her handbag, and picked it up between thumb and forefinger. I went back to the bottom of the cellar stairs to see what Arab wanted with the second gun.

The stairway was empty.

I went up the steps three at a time. Just as I reached the top a key clicked on the other side. The door was locked, and Arab had pulled a fast one on me. "Arab,"

I whispered, "come back here!" "You'll spoil everything," she replied from the other side of the door. "Somebody has to make a break for it. And I'm the one who can shoot."

"You idiot! I'm going to kick this door down if you don't open it."

She blew a kiss at me through the keyhole, and said, "The derringer has a stiff trigger action. Remember to point the open end away from you. Good-by, darling."

"Arab! You can't go! When I get hold of you . . . Arab!"

There was no answer.

Something clicked upstairs. "Shut up," I whispered. The click might have been from the cellar doorknob. I watched it carefully. Another click. It was the knob, all right; I had seen it turn that time. Somebody had tried it first one way, then the other. I remembered that there was a keyhole and that the cellar was dimly lighted. I took a step toward the light bulb.

Joey Raeder's voice chanted jeeringly, "Five-ten Lieutenant Blake and Mrs. Fielding!"

I moved slightly to one side, out of line with the keyhole.

"Come on, Jack," he said. "We got you cold. Unlock this door or we'll do it with a few slugs."

I didn't answer.

"We got your dame," he said. "I'd ask her to coax you, but we had to part her hair with a loaded rubber hose and she won't come for a while. She was heeled with a Smith and Wesson and one of the boys didn't want to have any words with her about it. Look, Jack, are you gonna—"

She climbed in slowly.

I yanked both triggers of the derringer and the explosion almost caved in my eardrums. My right arm jerked back, tingling. Two black holes sprouted in the cellar door and Joey began yelling that he was murdered. There was enough rage in his voice to tell me he wasn't really hurt and to warn me to get out of the way. I jumped aside just in time.

Wood began spraying from door and stairs. Sound blasted into the cellar: tremendous stutters of sound that seemed to make the foundations sway. One bullet smashed the electric-light bulb. In the darkened cellar the air became a live vicious thing scorching my lungs and jabbing knives into my ears. Joey had turned loose a Tommy gun. I started to dive into a corner . . . and Renee screamed. I had forgotten her. She was out in the middle of that traffic jam of bullets, tied in the chair.

I made a drunken lunge across the black cellar. The timing was right. My shoulder hit her chair at seat level. I kept on driving low and hard at the chair until the opposite wall smacked me flat. For a moment I lay there, unable to think of anything except that Roper would never have thrown me off the squad if I'd played defensive end like that.

"Anything get you?" I whispered. "Yes," she chattered. "In my left arm. Above the elbow. It feels like fire. Are they going to kill us? Are—"

"Take it easy. They can't hit us here." I ran my fingers lightly up her arm. A splinter quivered in the flesh above her left elbow. She moaned, and I snapped, "Keep quiet! They might try some three-cushion stuff if they locate us. And don't forget that bullets don't ask who you're working for."

"I will be quiet."

A harsh voice called down, "Lieutenant Blake."

I put a hand over Renee's mouth, and didn't answer. It sounded like Plain Mr. Jones.

He called, "There is no use hiding. It will merely delay events. Come up the steps with your hands raised."

I kept quiet.

"Nobody will have heard the shots," he went on. "There are no houses within a mile. It is useless to expect help."

Still silence.

"We will give you five minutes," he said.

I waited quietly and listened. Feet were pounding through the house. He wasn't really giving me five minutes, because it would take that long for his gang to search the place. When I was sure that nobody was trying to sneak down the cellar stairs, I whispered to Renee, "Remember what I said about bullets not asking whose side you're on. I'm going to fix your arm now. It's a splinter, a pretty big one. But I think it'll come out cleanly."

She choked back a cry. The splinter came out easily. It seemed to have nicked a vein, because her arm was getting wet and sticky. I whipped the handkerchief around the spot and began tying it.

"I don't know why you did all this for me," she murmured.

"You made too much noise. I kept losing count of the slugs going past."

"You really have no chance, have you?"

"They may get tired of playing with me if I pat a couple of them with that hatchet."

"You have been very generous to me. I will repay you some way."

I grunted, and went on trying to get the handkerchief just tight enough. Her free hand touched my hair and stroked it. It was soothing. I could feel the tips of two of her fingers stroking my cheek and suddenly I realized that she had the hatchet in her hand. I shuddered, started to turn.

The edge of the hatchet drew a chilly line on my forehead, and she hissed, "Hold still!"

I froze. The edge of the hatchet left my head but I knew it was poised there, inches away. I tried to guess where her right wrist was. When I grabbed, I had to connect. "I am not going to hit you," she gasped. "I just wanted to prove that I could have done it."

"Why?"

"So that you will trust me."

"My muscles relaxed a notch. 'Trust you about what?'"

"You have no chance fighting. They will merely come down with flashlights and shoot you. Your only chance is if they think you are dead. Give me the knife you were using."

I got it and handed it to her. After all, there wasn't much to lose. As she had said, she could easily have laid me out with the hatchet. Maybe this was a chance. She fumbled with my blouse and I felt her fingers tugging at the right breast pocket. She was using both hands and making small sobbing noises. The gasp from her splinter must be hurting. Suddenly the knife blade touched the skin over my heart, and I jerked away.

"Please," she whimpered. "I am trying to make it look like a bullet-hole. Please let me hurry. If they ever find me doing this . . ."

She pulled me back closer, and I felt something pressing against my chest. It was her left arm. The handkerchief had been pulled down from the deep splinter cut.

The last wisp of control snapped suddenly and she began to scream. Long, shuddering screams. I dropped to the floor. I had never felt sicker or more scared in my life but I had to go through with it now. A light fingered the cellar steps, probed toward us. I squeezed my eyelids shut and then remembered that dead men don't close their eyes and opened them and tried to roll the pupils up as far as possible. The light glared into them. Feet drummed on the stairs and the fat man yelled at Renee to shut up.

She babbled, "I fainted and then when I woke up and got my hands loose and I touched him and it was slippery and he didn't move and—"

Crack! That was a hand slapping Renee. She began to sob convulsively. I could see vague forms rising up to giant heights beside me and I turned my pupils up still farther to show nothing but the whites of my eyes. I tried not to breathe. My stomach was solid lead and I could feel sweat chilling my face. Somebody's foot was touching my side. If he looked closely he would know that dead men don't sweat.

Joey Raeder said, "Look here, chief! I got him right in the ticker and he had just enough left to crawl here and—"

"We will make sure," the harsh voice said, and then before I could move a parachute flare burst inside my head. It went drifting down and down and getting smaller and dimmer until it was merely a pinpoint of light and then it flickered out and there was nothing but a ringing blackness and then quiet.

Renee had done an artistic job on me in the dark. Over my heart was a ragged tear. The cloth was darkened and wet and sticky. The button over the pocket wasn't bright gold. It was red. My fingers were red, too, and back where I had been lying the floor was splashed with blood. It looked as if I ought to find a spade and save somebody the trouble of burying me. But the worst any doctor could say was that I needed a bath.

CANADA ISSUED STAMP IN 1898

Commemorated the First Anniversary of the Queen's Present.

In 1897 Victoria Regina celebrated the diamond jubilee of her reign as ruler of the British Empire. Impressed by the display of loyalty by her subjects in all corners of the globe, she announced that, as a Christmas present to all Britishers, she would reduce the postal rate to one penny or its local equivalent.

To commemorate the first anniversary of this stupendous gift, which has since saved her subjects millions of dollars, Canada produced a large postage stamp upon which is depicted a map of the world with all English territories printed in red ink. "Canada Postage—Xmas, 1898" was inscribed in the frame design. Thus Canada became the first country to issue a Christmas stamp, and the only stamp ever to bear the word "Xmas."

A Better 1946

Uncharted is the sea
On which my bark must sail;
If tempests there shall be
Or sunny calms prevail,
I know not; but I know,
Whatever winds may blow,
From east, north, south, or west,
They will be for my best;
Fear does not shake my heart,
For Thou my Pilot art!

I know that Thou wilt all
Thy promises fulfill;
Whatever may befall,
'Twill not be for my ill;
I know that Thou wilt guide
My bark through wind and tide;
That with my voyage past
I shall reach port at last;
Fear does not shake my heart,
For Thou my Pilot art!

Washington Started New Year's Open House at New York

George Washington, as first president of the United States, moved, with the seat of the newly founded government, from Philadelphia to New York in 1799.

New Year's Day, 1790, fell on a Friday; Washington, who had been accustomed to hold "open house" on Fridays in Philadelphia, continued to do so in New York. Therefore, it was not until the steady stream of callers on New Year's Day persisted throughout the late afternoon and evening that Washington gave the matter a second thought.

Inquiring whether such procedure was customary, Washington was informed, by a native New Yorker, that the Dutch settlers had brought the custom of making calls on New Year's Day to New Amsterdam; English and French colonists fell into the routine and, by 1790, no New Yorker would dream of letting the first day pass without calling upon his lady, his friends.

Washington caught the spirit of this "cordial and cheerful observance of New Year's Day" and continued the custom throughout his administration. Presidents Adams and Jefferson followed precedent and, when the capital moved to Washington, D. C., the reception became an integral part of the social calendar attended by increasing ceremonies and lengthening receiving lines—President Taft shook hands with about 6,000 persons in 1910.

Pres. Franklin D. Roosevelt suspended the White House reception in 1934, his lameness having made it difficult for him to stand in the receiving line for any length of time.

EARLY NEW YEAR'S DAY

Christopher Columbus was the first white man to celebrate New Year's Day in the Western hemisphere. While his ships were undergoing repairs on January 1, 1493, he enjoyed a sumptuous dinner with two savage monarchs on the island of Haiti. After his meal, historians say, the discoverer of America had his first smoke of tobacco.

Late in Arriving

Although the United States leads in many ways, in the eyes of Father Time, we are in sixth place. It seems he brings the New Year first to Australia, Asia, Africa, Europe and most of South America before he gets around to this country. Then for three more hours the people of California must be satisfied with 1945 before they receive the fresh new year of 1946. It will be 7 a. m. in New York on December 31 when the New Year is born in Australia.

NEW YEAR'S DELIGHT

A bugle sounded. The army band began to play a slow march. Molly straightened. She'd have to go in as she was. But she'd never be able to get through the crowd in time. She decided to go through the back door. She knocked.

"Come in." A red-headed soldier was staring at a big unfrosted cake on the kitchen table. Without looking up he murmured, "Well, it's about time you got back, Sophronia. Captain Adams just told me to go get his wife. Said she could cook anything. Sure need somebody. The Old Man is in a jam. Everything's gone wrong since this general got here about an hour ago, inspecting for the War Department. He don't seem to think much of the Old Man, and he's right likely to lose his regiment. If he does, I lose my job as colonel's orderly. Don't look like it's gonna be much of a happy new year. And on top of it you didn't show up this morning and—"

"Well, it's about time you got back, Sophronia."

So colonels, too, had problems. Molly smiled. Don had been going to send for her. Gayly she said, "I'm not Sophronia."

"What?" the soldier turned and looked at her. He groaned. "Just my luck! Guess I'll have to find that Mrs. Adams."

"I'm Mrs. Adams," she said. "We'll have to get busy. How much time have we?"

"Bout twenty minutes," volunteered the soldier.

"I see," smiled Molly. She surveyed the kitchen. A knife would improve the sandwiches. Punch was simple, with lemons and oranges and tea in the refrigerator. She made the icing. Fluffy white and rich brown chocolate.

The soldier tasted: "Say, ma'am, it's swell! But oughtn't it to be a little fancy? Roses and things like that?"

"That's an idea!" Molly's dimples appeared. Once she'd made a cake for Don and put his initials on it in chocolate frosting. Printed letters must have a magic charm. That night Don had proposed. Humming a tune, she spread the smooth chocolate. Don would have to admit now that she was a good army wife. Wasn't cooking the way to a man's heart, and hadn't Napoleon mentioned a soldier's stomach? She stopped in sudden realization. What were the colonel's initials?

Molly sighed, "I'll have to find out." She hurried into the library. Ah, the silver! She carefully copied the letters, Q.M.C. The cake was beautiful. One look and the colonel would be impressed.

She'd been right. Molly watched the colonel stand still and stare. So did the guests. There was an odd expression on the visiting general's face. Still, thought Molly, probably generals never smiled. Then she started. Mrs. Major Arnold was talking to Mrs. Captain Fox. "I wonder what the general thinks of Colonel Jones' having the initials quartermaster corps on his cake. Unusual, to say the least, when Colonel Jones is in the field artillery."

Another mistake! Molly turned. She'd failed. She'd hurt, not helped, Don. She'd never be a good army wife.

Don stopped her. "Molly, what did you mean?"

"I'm sorry—they were on the silver."

"The colonel," Don laughed, "hasn't got his things here, so he borrowed from the quartermaster. Darling, it was a wonderful idea. The general was quite flattered. He used to be in the quartermaster corps. In fact, everybody is happy. Come in, Molly. Wish the colonel a happy New Year. And it will be, thanks to you."

Have Hope New Years

As you approach the beginning of the new year, it is well to be companioned and sustained by hope. Tennyson might have been writing of our first postwar Christmas when he said:

"Hope the best, but hold the present, fatal daughter of the past,

"Shape your heart to front the hour, but dream not that the hour will last."

The war is over and we can only hope and pray it was the last.

Handy Door Pocket And Laundry Bag

THE door pocket and laundry bag shown here are from Book 8 of the series of booklets offered with these articles. Here are the details so you can go right ahead now.

Choose chintz 36 inches wide with bias tape to match. You will need 2½ yards of chintz and 10 yards of the tape. Buy an extra yard of chintz and tape for the laundry bag. Cut the foundation piece for the door 34 inches long and 18 inches wide. Bind this all around first. Shoe pockets are 22 inches long and 8 inches deep. Plan the other pockets to fit things for which they are to be used. Bind the tops of pockets, make a 1-inch box pleat in the bottom of each, turn under raw edges; then baste and stitch them to the foundation.

The 30-inch-deep laundry bag is a full width of the fabric folded and stitched down one side and across the bottom, but stitch the front pocket on before you do this. The bound slash in the front is 12 inches deep and the top is shaped to fit a hanger.

NOTE: Book 8 is 35 cents postpaid and contains 32 pages of useful things that you will be wanting to make for your home. Send order to:

Why, to Some, Coolidge Was Ideal Banquet Orator

Silent Cal, they called Calvin Coolidge, even before he became President of the United States.

On one occasion, while he was yet vice president, Coolidge was invited to a dinner party by Alice Roosevelt Longworth, whose brilliant salons were the hub of Washington's social life. After an hour of chattering to Coolidge without getting any response better than a mumble, Mrs. Longworth asked with venom: "Mr. Coolidge, why do you go to so many dinners if they bore you this much?"

Cal kept on munching and just shrugged, "Well, a fellow has to eat some place."

Mr. and Mrs. A. Johnson, 17620 66th Ave. announce the engagement of their son Henry A. Johnson to Miss Doris Ceithaml of 2807 West 55th St., Chicago.

The Jolly Girls pinocle club met last week at the home of Doris Andres. A jolly time was had and Christmas gifts were exchanged. The hostess later served a delicious lunch.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Roberts and children Lynne and Johnny spent Christmas day in Coal City with Mrs. Roberts parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Boggio.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Nielsen and daughter Audrey, were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Roberts.

T.4 Marvin L. Meyer, son of Rev. and Mrs. Henry Meyer of Coopers Grove received his discharge last Saturday and arrived home the same day. He has been in service 34 months and spent 30 months overseas in the Central Burma and India Burma theatres.

Marvin wears 5 overseas service bars, Asiatic Pacific theatre ribbon with 2 Bronze battle stars. Good conduct ribbon. Distinguished Presidential badge, Meritorious Unit award and the Victory medal.

He served in the Quartermaster Supply Unit.

December 22 was quite an exciting day for Miss Naomi Horn, for she celebrated her 6th birthday at a party given by her grandmother, Mrs. Robt. Horn.

Many of her schoolmates and Sunday School friends and playmates attended 22 in all. Naomi's mother, Mrs. Herbert Horn and aunt Mrs. Clifford Horn helped with the party.

The party was a huge success and Naomi thanks all her little friends for their lovely gifts. The house was beautifully decorated in keeping with Christmas and a very nice Poinsetta plant, the gift of Mrs. Clifford Horn, graced the center of the table.

The Royal Neighbor Juveniles enjoyed a wonderful Christmas party last Saturday evening. Games were played and singing enjoyed. Each child received two gifts and the oracle Mrs. Margaret Miller, donated four lovely gifts, namely: a doll, a doll bunny, a rabbit and a box of fruit. These were awarded to the children. A table was decorated in red and green with a small Christmas tree gracing the center of it. Hot chocolate with whipped cream and Christmas cookies were served. Each child received a box of candy also and to top it off, Santa dropped in for a short visit. All went home, pleased with their fine party. 30 Juveniles and 14 adults were present.

Irene L. Johnston, 22 formerly Y1-c in the US Coast Guard, has been released from the service and is returning to Tinley Park as a civilian to take up residence at 173rd S. 84th Ave. She has concluded 26 months of service in the Coast Guard having been on duty in the U. S.

She will live with her husband Robert A. Johnston.

To Wish you Health and Happiness

WE'VE SEEN a great many changes in our day..... changes in styles, changes in customs, and changes in transportation. But one thing has remained unchanged during all these years—our determination to lead the way at all times in value-giving. We enter 1946 fully pledged to stand by our time-honored custom.

HAPPY NEW YEAR, FRIENDS!

Frank Elmore, Tinley Pk.

Victory does not only apply to nations at war. We can win victories over ourselves, too, and over the problems which lay in our path.

As 1946 sweeps in upon us we wish for each of you an unbroken series of victories over any and all circumstances that may tend to retard your progress towards every individual's cherished goals—health and happiness.

Good luck to you every step of the way!

the air and in laboratories, it's anybody's guess as to the air marvels the New Year will offer to benefit you.

Local Upsweep: For that modern look in 1946: Rubinkam Airport will new buildings, new runways, new improvements. Chicago-Hammond Airport is now building new hangers, Prosperi Airport will have many improvements, which may include flood lights for nite flying. And, Manager, Ed Prosperi, as sales agent, will be displaying new post war planes.

A "Case" of Good Flying! Rubinkam Airport was the starting point for the flying career of a local pilot, Dick Case, who served in the Air Force and is now a Captain with American Airlines! Dick is modest about his excellent record of four thousand flying hours. He has never had a forced landing, but has had many exciting adventures.

Once, while instrument flying for Uncle Sam in Alaska—the heaters in the cabin went on the "blink." As Dick and his crew wrapped each other in blankets trying to keep from freezing, the cabin registered as low as twenty degrees below zero.

For his landing, Dick was to make an instrument approach—until he got below the fog and could spot the landing field. The plane approached where the instruments indicated the field to be. But Dick and crew couldn't see a thing, outside the cabin. There wasn't much else to do, but shiver and circle, which they did until they discovered the windows were frozen with ice inches thick on the inside of the plane. After scraping this off—they spotted the field and Dick managed to bring them down.

"Hanger flying" the other day, Dick said that there's a certain "something" about flying. Once you get interested and get the flying "bug", you never get away from planes, and even on the few times when things go snafu, you're still happy!

"Check" Dick. I know what you mean. That's all for now.

The annual Christmas program given by the pupils of the Frankfort school was well attended in spite of the illness in the community.

The program opened with the song, "Jingle Bells" and the pledge of Allegiance to the flag by the entire school. Three playlets were presented: A Mother Goose playlet with all the children dressed as Nursery rhyme characters was given by Room 1, Miss Annette Kohlhausen, teacher. "A Fat Jolly Old Man" was presented by the intermediate classes, under Mrs. Henry Heisner.

Miss Viola Lankenau's room brought the program to a close with the play "Too Busy for Christmas".

Between the plays, Christmas carols were sung by the groups and Arlene Borms played selections on her piano accordion. Mayor George Sangmeister presented each child and each high school student present, with a candy bar.

The Methodist Youth Fellowship went from house to house caroling last Friday evening.

School Dist. 155 with Mrs. Lawrence Woodman as teacher, gave their Christmas program last Thursday night. They gave a play and numerous recitations. Santa Claus for the evening was Dale Kratzburg. A card party and gift exchange followed. Refreshments were served.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

STEVE: "How was the hospital dinner, Judge? Sorry I couldn't get there."

OLD JUDGE: "Very interesting, Steve. One of the doctors on the staff read a paper on the research work that is going on at one of the big universities where they are studying chronic alcoholism."

STEVE: "I'd like to have heard that, Judge."

OLD JUDGE: "He pointed out that approximately 95% of the people who drink do so sensibly. Only 5% abuse the privilege oc-asionally and included in that 5% is the very small number known as alcoholics. Then he quoted a doctor from a famous university who said 'Alcoholics are sick persons and, if treated as such, may be cured.' Alcoholism, he said, is not caused by alcohol but by deep-rooted emotional derailments which can be prevented by education and often cured through modern psychology!"

STEVE: "That's the most sensible approach to the problem I've heard."

EVERYONE—is included in our wishes for a HAPPY and PROSPEROUS NEW YEAR—wishes which are drawn from the deep, pure wells of hope.

You have helped make the past year a most pleasant one for us. Mindful of this, we have but one thought as we enter 1946—to be fully worthy of the confidence you have reposed in us.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Schmidt and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Warning were guests at supper of their mother and sister, Mrs. Emma Schmidt and Christina.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Kreis and family of Joliet, Mr. Emil and Karl Krapp and Mrs. Marie Kreis of Mokena, were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Krapp and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Schmidt visited the former's brother, Charles, in the Illinois Research hospital in Chicago Wednesday. They report Mr. Schmidt to be doing fine, he is up and around all day.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Benson entertained a few friends in their home Wednesday evening.

Again we say Happy New Year to our friends and patrons. May 1946 bring you more health, happiness and prosperity than you have ever before enjoyed.

HAPPY NEW YEAR 1946

WE SALUTE YOU AS THE NEW YEAR DAWNS Now, when the hopeful New Year is about to take its place on the world stage, we salute the brave men and women who have so splendidly guarded America's precious heritage of freedom. We salute you, too, good friends and neighbors. Ours is a debt of gratitude we can hardly repay. Better days are ahead for all of us, we are reasonably sure, and we want you to know how deeply we appreciate your friendship.

BILLY CONN has it all figured out. Not only for himself—but also for Joe Louis. The showing made by returning ball players has cheered him up.

Billy Conn

The leading challenger for the heavyweight title takes this angle—

"A number of people have wondered what sort of fighting form Joe Louis and I would be able to show by the date of our meeting next summer. A lot of them seem to think that the bout will be nothing but a pair of worn out old-timers doing the best they can. That doesn't make any sense in my book.

"You remember they thought the same way about a lot of ball players. There was Hank Greenberg, out four years, around 35 years old. But Hank was almost as good as ever, after a short workout. Then there's Red Ruffing, close to 40. And you can take up Bob Feller, Charlie Keller, and most of the others. Most of the returned veterans have stepped right back into the middle of things. And several of them were older than Joe Louis, much older than I am.

"Both Louis and I have at least two advantages over most of the ball players—Greenberg, anyway. We've been doing a lot of boxing. I've had something like 350 exhibitions to handle. That's more work than I'd have gotten if I had stayed at home. Louis has had just as much. We've both had enough ring work to keep pretty well sharpened. I mean not to get rusty.

Will Trim to 182 Pounds

"That's one edge. Now here's another—as a rule the ball players returning from service had only a short while to get back in championship shape. Louis and I will have until June. Three months is about all the training anybody needs for a fight. I expect to work my weight from 191 down to 182 pounds. I wouldn't want to go below that. I certainly won't lose any of my speed at 182. That's eight pounds heavier than I was in our first fight, where I was a little too much on the light side.

"I'd also like to say that I don't figure I'm meeting any old, worn-out fellow in Joe Louis. After all he is three years younger than Hank Greenberg and nine years younger than Red Ruffing, and no one is picking on either that I've heard about."

There are still one or two rather important factors that Conn must consider. He is younger than Louis and he is faster than Louis. But Conn must also know that on the day or night they meet, Louis will be in the best possible physical shape he can reach.

What about Conn? Billy has always had a leaning in the general direction of the primrose trail. And no such trail ever leads to any top, barring a few exceptions. Conn is young and headstrong, a fellow who likes a good time. Who doesn't? But no one is going to beat even an aging Joe Louis liking a good time.

Joe Louis at 31 is far from being an old man. He is a trifle over the hill, but not so far over. He has always been a great fighter, and he will be pretty close to being a great fighter the night he meets Conn, or any one else, with the blue chips down.

Billy is a fellow you like, but he has always been irresponsible and hard to direct. He has supreme confidence in himself. He had too much confidence in himself the night he met Louis. For one example, after the 12th round of that fight he wasn't looking for a mere victory, he was looking for a knock-out.

Peril of Over-Confidence

What Conn's many supporters are afraid of is this—that Conn will take it for granted that he can whip Louis in their next meeting, without working too hard to reach this difficult goal. If that happens Conn won't have a chance. After all, he can't punch with Louis, either with the right or left hand.

It might surprise Billy to know how many experts rate Louis the better boxer, granting that Conn has more speed. Taking no credit from Conn, Louis was verging on the side of staleness when they met before. It is my belief that the Bomber will be even harder to beat when they meet again.

Conn has never been any too keen about the grind of training. Few ring men are. But this time Pittsburgh Billy will need all he can get—especially road work—and the type of training needed to bring back or to increase his speed. This doesn't mean that the likable challenger will have to spend all his time until next June on the job.

It does mean, however, that he should get started along the right road and gradually bring himself to the day he actually moves to his training camp for the final spin. Summer isn't so far away.

Tire-Tube Method Of Post Treatment

Life of Fence Posts Extended Thirty Years

Fence posts of nondurable wood can be made to have 20 to 30 years of life, or even more, by the simple method of tire-tube treating. By this method the bark is peeled for a distance of 4 to 6 inches from the large end of the post, to provide a smooth, clean surface.

A section of old inner tube about two feet long is slipped over the peeled surface and bound in place. The post is then laid on a rack with the large end about two feet or more higher than the small end. In a short time the preservative, contained in the tube, will begin to flow into the sapwood of the post, forcing the natural sap out at the small end. When all the preservative has flowed from the tire tube into the wood, the tube is removed and the post taken from the rack.

The length of time required for the preservative to flow will depend upon quantity used, condition of wood, season, and other factors, and will vary from 8 to 24 hours. The preservative can be coal-tar creosote or mixtures of creosote with other suitable oils.

New in Machinery Poultry

Proper nests make it possible to secure the greatest returns possible for eggs produced. Cracked and dirty eggs must be a total loss or sell at a discount. Feed must be taken out of the bag and put into the hen without waste.

Upper cut shows an ideal tier of nests. Lower a modern metal feeding hopper. They are both products of the Oakes Manufacturing company, Tipton, Ind.

New in Machinery Silage

Next season will find many of the new Papec Machine company's silage harvesters in operation.

Farmers, again faced with labor problems, are placing their order for the silage harvester, which enables silage to be put up with half the usual help.

Dairy Cow Minerals

There are five minerals likely to be different in practical dairy rations: common salt, calcium, phosphorus, and iodine. All the other minerals which dairy cattle need are usually supplied in common feeds.

Mineral supplements are not needed except when there are definite signs of a deficiency. Feeding mineral supplements is an expensive and a poor remedy for underfeeding. Persistent desire of cattle to lick or eat dirt shows calcium deficiency.

Tenth of a Dollar

THE high school kid who took over behind the cigar counter while the druggist went to supper winked as he brushed past the soda fountain girl, then he paused. "That's the old skinflint who lives down the street," he whispered, jerking his head in the direction of the old man who stood near the phone booth. "He asked for..."

The old skinflint was Guy Baxter, and while the term didn't exactly describe him, it did in a vague way epitomize his reputation for keeping a close tab on money. He was a bookkeeper—a mighty good one—who had a deep respect for money; his own, and his employer's, the wholesale grocery firm of Farrell & Sons Company.

In fact, that abiding regard for money had only that morning—his fiftieth anniversary at Farrell's—led him to commit the one deliberately dishonest act of his maturity. He had passed a counterfeit dime.

That dime menaced his peace of mind a few minutes later as he peeled off his coat and vest and climbed up on the high stool at his desk. Nervously he smoothed his thin thatch of gleaming white hair, and there was trouble in his pale blue eyes as he carefully removed his glasses from the case. For the first time in seventy-odd years he knew himself as a cheat, and he found the intimacy repugnant.

He had passed a counterfeit dime.

And then, in mid-morning, Farrell called Guy into the office. "Sit down, Guy," Farrell said cordially, lacing his white fingers into a double fist atop his desk and smiling at the old man. "I suppose you know it was just fifty years ago today that you started to work for my father? You've been a good man, Guy," said Farrell matter-of-factly. "You're honest, you're reliable." He smiled. "But let's save all that for tonight. We've planned a little celebration for you at the Jefferson Hotel. A fellow like you deserves a pat on the back."

"Yes, sir," Guy went back to his desk, but he couldn't work. He couldn't focus on figures and sums. He thought of Farrell's praise and he thought of the lead dime, and he squirmed. He wasn't honest. And he wasn't reliable, for even in so minor a matter as a counterfeit dime he had failed himself. He had sold a record of honesty for a dime—a lead one. How could he go to the banquet tonight and listen to all those nice things people always said at banquets, when down in his heart he knew just how mean and petty he had been that morning?

He couldn't. He had to get that dime back. Mere restitution—handing over another dime, a good one, to the Bedford Lunch, where he passed it off—wouldn't be enough. He had to get that coin back—to keep it out of circulation so it couldn't go on cheating people for the rest of Guy's life.

So he hurried from the office at quitting time and went directly to Bedford's Lunch. There was a chance that the dime hadn't been passed on. If Bedford would only show him the contents of the partition in the cash register, Guy could pick it out.

But the night cashier was in no mood to listen to Guy's halting attempts to explain. "I got no time to monkey with dimes now, mister," he said irritably. "If you got a squawk with Bedford, see him in the morning."

Tomorrow would be too late, of course. Baxter was due at the banquet tonight, in just an hour or two. The lead dime stood squarely in his way. He couldn't go. He started for the drugstore at the corner. He'd have to call Mr. Farrell and make some excuse. There was no use trying to explain, because Mr. Farrell would only laugh and tell Guy not to be silly. But it wasn't silly. All this because he had pocketed his change yesterday without first studying it.

"... he asked for change for a quarter so he could make a phone call," the high school kid whispered to the soda fountain girl. "Remember that lead dime Bedford showed us this afternoon? Bedford gave it to me and I've been savin' it up at the cash register just waitin' for the right guy. I'm goin' to try to pass it off on that old skinflint over there. Watch me spoil his day."

IT WORKED, ANYHOW

An American soldier who had heard of English eccentricity, found himself one day—in a remote village—riding in a pony trap with a retired colonel. Every hundred yards the colonel took a little pinch of powder from a packet and threw it on the road behind him. Finally the G.I. asked what the powder was. "It's anti-lion powder," said the colonel sternly.

"But," said the American, "there are no lions in this country."

"You're right," said the colonel. "and it's a good thing, too, because this anti-lion powder is no earthly good."

Carrie—How so?

Larry—She believes she can wear a size six on a seven foot.

Their Operations

Mr.—What did the women discuss at the Red Cross meeting today?

Mrs.—Oh, they talked mainly about the latest amendments to their constitutions.

Hoping for the Best

John—I hear your mother-in-law is very ill.

Bill—Yes, the doctors say she's at death's door. I hope they can pull her through.

Microscopic

Walter—This is the best restaurant in town. If you order eggs, you get the freshest in town. If you order hot soup, you get the hottest in town.

Diner—I believe you're right. I ordered a small steak.

Tales of the Town:

In the Astor the other midnight Romo Vincent got a big laugh telling pals about the drunk who zig-zagged into a bar and ordered a triple martini. . . . After swallowing two of them he decided the bartender was his friend. Reaching into his coat pocket he brought forth a live lobster and offered it to the bartender, who tried refusing it several times. . . . Finally, the bartender decided it would be better to take the dumb thing than argue about it.

"Okay," he said, gripping the lobster. "I'll take it home for dinner."

"Oh, no, don't do that!" cried the lush. "He's already had dinner—take him to the movies!"

A war correspondent back from Tokyo brought this. You may recall that when Tojo shot himself, an American commentator in Japan flashed: "Tojo has killed himself!" . . . When the reporter returned to Tojo's house he learned the old so-and-so was still alive. . . . "Oh, damn it!" shrieked the broadcaster. "I just told CBS listeners that he killed himself!"

Tojo was lying on his back and the blood was flowing. . . . One G.I. looked at another. Someone suddenly broke the hush and said: "What the hell? He's gonna die anyway and good riddance. Let's turn the So-and-So over on his belly so the blood will run more freely!" . . . And they did so. . . . Pretty soon the doctor arrived and examined Tojo. . . . Turning to the G.I.s and correspondents the doctor inquired: "Who turned him over?"

"We did!" they all yelled.

"Well," sighed the doc, "you saved his life."

Shirley Temple's book, "My Young Life" (her autobiography), which was written by a New York girl at a weekly wage. . . . Madeleine Carroll spurning all screen and stage offers to continue serving the Red Cross. . . . Dinah Shore coping every popularity poll this year for gal thrushes. . . . The way Pres. Truman has "aged" in his first season at the White House.

Not physically—but over his unhappiness at the way "my old friends in the Senate have let me down."

Earl Browder (former chief of the Americomms) is being investigated by a special board of the Nat'l Committee of the Communist Party. They suspect him of organizing an opposing faction within the party. . . . June Haver has called off her romance with Vic Mature. He's so busy squiring Cleatus Caldwell, anyhow. . . . Ruth Hogg, who vocals on some Harry James recordings, is Betty Grable. . . . Wm. Eythe is coming here to visit Margaret Whiting, which debunks the trite of a parting.

Lindbergh intermediary Irving Bitz is back—working for an eve'g paper. . . . Norma Richter, one of the 3 top models (making $1,000 weekly), has chucked it all to marry Chas. Rose, coast gem merchant. . . . "Oklahoma Gin" is the rage. Players get ten cards each—the next card is turned up. Players can't knock with less than ten points than the value of that card. It's the newest short cut to ruin. . . . Art-craft Hosiery (one of the biggest firms) will bet any amount that nylons will not be available (in retail stores) until some time in 1947. . . . After twenty-four years' service to our country, underpaid G-Man Hoover is broke.

Fiddle-Faddle and Piffle: Willkie will be on a stamp soon. . . . James Melton may get the role of "Curly" in the film version of "Okla." . . . John Roosevelt, recently libeled in a syndicated col'm (from Washington) as a "conchie," will be interested to learn that the author has since been fired. . . . John W. Raper, the ageless Cleveland philosopher, has put his pepigrams between covers. It is titled: "What This World Needs." . . . Joseph E. Davies may author another book to clear up matters since Potsdam. . . . John Gunther has visited 47 states to compile data for his next book, "Inside U.S.A." He will visit Delaware as soon as he is completely mended from the flu. He is sunning at the Roney-Pleasure Cabana Club.

Talk about gall! In an interview with an American newsboy, Mussolini's spouse defended the policies and the Romeing of her two-timing hubby. She then added that she wished to come to America to give lectures. What! And give Liz Dilling competition?

Chorus girls, believe it or not, often discuss politics. At Nicky Blair's Carnival the other night one asked: "Why are there two political parties? Is it that there are two sides to every question?"

"No," observed Jayne Westbrook, "it's because there are two sides to every political office—outside and inside."

SNAPPY FACTS

about RUBBER

The majority of Army surplus tires are to be allocated among states, cities, counties and federal agencies, and then to veterans.

The great battery of synthetic rubber plants erected during the war cost approximately $700,000,000. More than 30,000 synthetic rubber compounds were prepared during the war, about 500 will have peace-time uses.

The heaviest single load ever moved on pneumatic tires was 300 tons and for a secret military project; equipment was carried on a huge trailer having 64 wheels shod with B. F. Goodrich truck tires.

Well-Fitting Frock

JUNIORS love it—the gay cap-sleeved frock that fits like a dream. This long-waisted version has soft waistline gathers to accent a tiny midriff and a flattering sweetheart neck. Make it in a pretty all-over floral print for that "most-important" date.

Pattern No. 8901 comes in sizes 11, 12, 13, 14, 16 and 18. Size 12 needs 3 yards of 39-inch or 3 1/4 yards of 35-inch material.

Simple Two-Piecer

EASY to make and a joy to wear, this simple yet sophisticated two-piece costume will see you through many a busy day. Dainty gathers at sleeves and waistline give a gentle feminine look. And for trimming, use unusual flower-shaped buttons.

Pattern No. 1386 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20; 40 and 42. Size 14, short sleeves, takes 3 3/4 yards of 39-inch material; three-quarter sleeves, 3 3/4 yards.

Brooms and brushes: Wash after use, and store.

It's handier to pour waffle batter from a pitcher than to spoon it from a bowl.

An old sheet spread over the floor around the sewing table will catch threads and ravelings and make picking up easier.

When roast chicken is half done, sprinkle lightly and restrainedly with nutmeg, finish baking and hear the praises of the diners.

Cook meat at a low temperature to keep essential juices, for better flavor and to make the protein more tender.

Hickory nuts placed in boiling water and let stand for an hour will crack easier and come out in larger pieces. The thin-shelled kind require less time.
